Spy Tools Directory Partners with National Alert Registry.net

Online Service Alerts Members When Sex Offenders Move Into Their Neighborhoods

12/04/03 - Emphasizing its commitment to providing the best in investigative tools to its users, the Spy Tools Directory today announced a partnership with National Alert Registry.net, the online registered sex offender database.

"We're very excited about this new relationship," says Steve Salm, senior editor. "The National Alert Registry allows our U.S. users to not only identify how many (or if any) registered sex offenders live in their neighborhoods, but to also obtain names, addresses, and even photos of these individuals. In the effort to keep families safe from sexual predators, this service is invaluable."

National Alert Registry.net (<http://www.national-alert-registry.net>) is prominently featured as an "Editor's Choice" in the Directory's "Online Services" category, and has also been provided ad space to increase its exposure.

"I've got kids myself, as well as a stay-at-home wife," says Salm. "I signed up for the service and found two registered sex offenders living within a mile of my own home. At first I was shocked, but now I feel much better knowing who to watch out for in my own neighborhood. The fact that the National Alert Registry will email me if any others move into my neighborhood makes me feel a lot better about being able to keep my family safe."

"It's the intention of all of us here at the Spy Tools Directory to make sure that everyone in the U.S finds out about this service and signs up for the alert emails. I can't stress enough how important this information is," Salm explained further.

The National Alert Registry currently has over 300,000 registered sex offenders in its database, and is updated daily.
